HOW IT STARTED. HOW IT'S GOING. ACG AT 90

Honoring ACG's Past, Celebrating the College Today, and Looking to the Future.

Founding Principles

ACG at 90 is a vibrant, diverse, and forward-looking organization with a vision and mission that have evolved to keep pace with the times but have never strayed from our founding principles. ACG is proud of its heritage as a broadly inclusive organization dedicated to the advancement of clinical gastroenterology that champions the interests of clinical GI practitioners.

#ACGat90

HOW IT STARTED

1932

A group of 10 clinical gastroenterologists in and around New York City who believed that there was a need for an organization to serve the interests of practicing clinicians involved in patient care and research meet at the home of Samuel Weiss, MD and found the New York Society for the Advancement of Gastroenterology.

Samuel Weiss, MD

In an era during which the pursuits of some medical organizations were perceived as exclusive in tone and action, the medical society now known as ACG is envisioned by its founders as “a more inclusive organization of physicians interested especially in the clinical aspects of digestive disorders.”

1934

The organization name is changed to the National Society for the Advancement of Gastroenterology to reflect the aspirations of the organizational leadership and the interests of clinical gastroenterologists from around the country. The Review of Gastroenterology is first published in 1934.

1938

The organization again changes its name, this time to the National Gastroenterological Association.

1954

The modern organization takes shape as the NGA is renamed the American College of Gastroenterology and creates a Board of Governors to connect the Board of Trustees to local gastroenterologists throughout the United States. The journal is renamed The American Journal of Gastroenterology.

HOW IT'S GOING

Today, the American College of Gastroenterology remains true to its roots as a broadly inclusive organization dedicated to the advancement of clinical gastroenterology that champions the interests of clinical GI practitioners.

As the College looks back with pride at our rich 90-year history, we also celebrate ACG today – a vibrant, diverse, and forward-looking organization with a vision and mission that have evolved to keep pace with the times but have never strayed from our founding principles.

Vision Statement

The ACG is the preeminent professional organization that champions the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of digestive disorders, serving as a beacon to guide the delivery of the highest quality, compassionate, and evidence-based patient care.

Mission Statement

Our mission is to enhance the ability of our members to provide world class care to patients with digestive disorders and advance the profession through excellence and innovation based upon the pillars of Patient Care, Education, Scientific Investigation, Advocacy, and Practice Management.

Journals

The Review of Gastroenterology is first published in 1934 and Samuel Weiss, MD served as Editor-in-Chief until 1964. In 1954, the journal officially is renamed The American Journal of Gastroenterology and gets its distinctive red cover. A tradition of outstanding editorial leadership and dedication to clinical science continues as new titles are added to the family of ACG journals: Clinical and Translational Gastroenterology (2010); ACG Case Reports Journal (2013); and Evidence-Based Gastroenterology (2021).

In no area of gastroenterology has there been greater evolution or more rapid pace of innovation than in endoscopy. Education, training, and promoting quality in clinical gastroenterology and endoscopy are centerpieces of the life of the College today.

Education

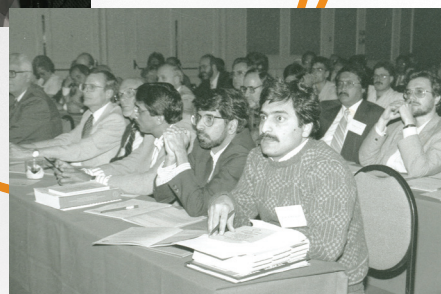

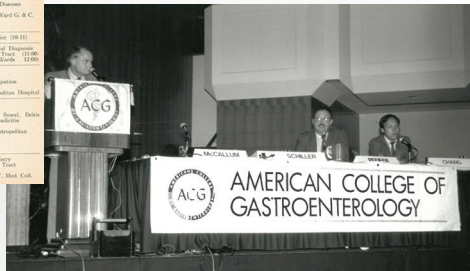

The College is an educational organization dedicated to excellence in CME for the GI profession. Our Postgraduate Course started in the 1940s and remains a timely, relevant, and valuable update in clinical GI, hepatology, and endoscopy. ACG's agility in evolving to meet the needs of our learners was put to the test during the COVID-19 pandemic, but we nimbly rose to the challenge by offering a Virtual Annual Scientific Meeting & Postgrad Course in 2020 and launching weekly Virtual Grand Rounds.

Advocacy and Public Policy

Representing the interests of clinical gastroenterology and patients with GI and liver disorders before lawmakers and regulators is a longstanding priority for ACG. Among ACG's proudest achievements are legislative outcomes that have helped shaped modern GI practice including coverage of colorectal cancer screening. The Board of Governors, in partnership with leadership training participants from the ACG Institute, are the driving force behind ACG's Advocacy Day. Throughout the year, ACG members interact with Members of Congress and policymakers in the federal agencies to advance ACG's public policy priorities.

Women in GI & Diversity in GI

The pioneering women in gastroenterology who forged a path in the organization in the early 1990s paved the way, and in many ways set the tone, for the diverse organization ACG is today. The College honors ACG's first female president, Christina M. Surawicz, MD, MACG (1998-1999) as a role model and inspiration to the GI profession. ACG celebrates the women who have followed in her footsteps in leadership roles at every level of the organization and all those who have inspired a culture that embraces diversity, equity and inclusion in GI.

ACG Institute for Clinical Research & Education

Since 1994, the ACG Institute for Clinical Research & Education has served as a forum to advance the research and education mission of the American College of Gastroenterology, making a meaningful and measurable difference in launching the careers of young clinical investigators by protecting time for research, funding innovative patient care-oriented research, and serving as an incubator for important initiatives including the launch of The Center for Leadership, Ethics & Equity in 2021.
